ALA Recognizes GPO for Supporting Libraries and Literacy

The U.S. Government Printing Office (GPO) was recognized at a "Partners Appreciation Day" program on April 4, 1990, for its participation in the national literacy movement and involvement with disseminating information to libraries. Sponsored by the American Library Association (ALA), the program was hosted by the International President of the General Federation of Women's Clubs at its headquarters in Washington, DC. About twenty of the sixty members of the "Partners," GPO among them, were presented with certificates of appreciation.

The Partners are national organizations which join with ALA in promoting libraries and literacy during National Library Week and throughout the year. GPO has supported and promoted libraries for many years through its Library Programs Service under the Superintendent of Documents. In the last two years GPO has become involved with the literacy movement, bringing the graphic arts industry into the large coalition that recognizes the First Lady, Barbara Bush, as its unofficial leader.

Last year, GPO was recognized for its leadership in jointly hosting the 1988 literacy symposium with the U.S. Department of Education and coordinating the ERASE ILLITERACY billboard campaign. This year, GPO was recognized for providing support to the American Newspaper Publishers Association Foundation during two major conferences, one in Denver and one at the Smithsonian Institution in Washington. GPO also provided coordinating liaison services for the development of the Graphic Arts Literacy Alliance, which will continue to implement the recommendations of the 1988 symposium.

GPO's suggestion for a literacy postcard became a reality recently, although a different design than the one submitted was approved. The new postcard pictures the earth on top of an open book, with the caption: The world is an open book. A personal computer with the legend "Literacy: a stronger future, a better world" on the screen appears in the lower left hand corner.

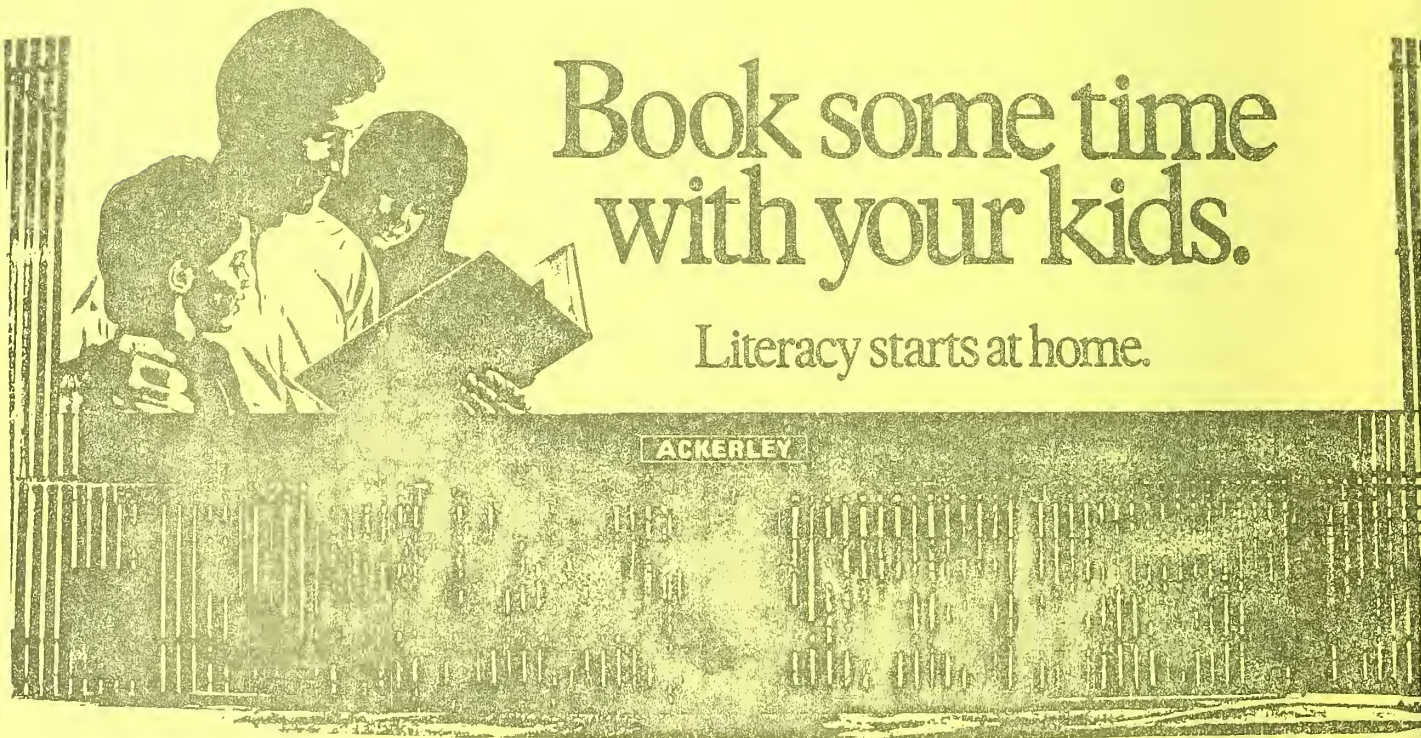

Government agencies represented at the program in addition to GPO included: the U.S. Department of Education, the Library of Congress, the National Library of Medicine, and the National Agricultural Library. Non-governmental organizations included: the Literacy Volunteers of America, Reading is Fundamental, National Council on Aging, State Services Organization, as well as the host -- General Federation of Women's Clubs, and the sponsor -- American Library Association.

GPO Literacy Coordinator Charles Potter announced the second billboard in the graphic arts literacy campaign. Produced by the Outdoor Advertising Association of America, it pictures an adult with two children and recommends: "Book some time with your kids. Literacy starts at home."

The new billboard was dedicated by the First Lady at a billboard manufacturing facility in Miami, Florida, several months ago. GPO is facilitating the literacy link between the Outdoor Advertising Association and the ALA to help print wall posters and small billboard cards for libraries. The actual printing will be done through the Graphic Arts Technical Foundation in Pittsburgh.

Krystle Patrick, Program Coordinator for Reading is Fundamental, singled out GPO for special praise when she noted that the billboard campaign has been helpful by permitting local billboard advertisers to place the Literacy hotline telephone number at the bottom of the billboard. The representative from the Special Libraries Association was particularly excited about the new literacy postcard. GPO is proud to be able to contribute to this important campaign.

Economic Bulletin Board Pilot Project Poised to Begin at 100 Depository Libraries

One hundred depository libraries (listed below) have been selected to participate in the Economic Bulletin Board (EBB) pilot project to provide online access to current economic and statistical information generated by a variety of Federal agencies. Implementation of the project is set for June 1, 1990; depository test sites will be allowed unlimited access to the Commerce Department bulletin board until the end of the year. The purpose of the project is to better understand the implications of providing depository library access to government data bases on GPO, other Federal agencies, and the depository library community. The General Accounting Office (GAO) will be assisting GPO in evaluating results of the project.

Libraries were selected in accordance with the site selection plan developed by GAO and described in the EBB information packet mailed to all depository libraries in January 1990. Of the 100 test sites, 86 were selected by GAO using computer sampling techniques based on libraries' size, type, and geographic location (i.e., time zone). The remaining test sites, called discretionary test sites, were selected for possible case study evaluation based on responses to the EBB survey.
